Department of Foreign Languages

The mission of the Department of Foreign Languages is to address language skills needs, inter-cultural understanding, and global awareness by offering curricula, services, and research that broaden cultural understanding, increase language proficiency, and enable people to function in the global and international settings of southeast Georgia and throughout the world. The programs of the Department serve all academic divisions of the University in providing the language and culture training necessary to support their international and inter-cultural endeavors.

Foreign language proficiency is stressed in every course offered by the Department. Classes are kept small to enable greater student participation and to provide constant reinforcement of language skills in listening, speaking, reading, and writing. All classes, beginning with the first course, are taught in the target foreign language.

Students graduating with a B.A. degree in Modern Languages will:

1) demonstrate Advanced-Low proficiency in speaking as defined by ACTFL. The student who has reached the Advanced-Low proficiency level demonstrates the ability to create with the language and handle a variety of communicative tasks.

2) demonstrate Advanced-Low proficiency in writing as defined by ACTFL. The student who has reached the Advanced-Low proficiency level demonstrates the ability to meet basic work and/or academic writing needs.

3) demonstrate Advanced-Mid proficiency in reading as defined by ACTFL. The student who has reached the Advanced-Mid proficiency level demonstrates the ability to understand conventional narrative and descriptive texts, such as magazine and newspaper articles, short stories, and non-fiction texts.

4) demonstrate the ability to think critically by analyzing the intellectual and cultural traditions and artifacts of the regions where the target language is used.
