Honors in English

To graduate with Honors in English, a student must:

- be admitted to the University Honors Program;
- successfully complete at least three credit hours of Honors Research Seminar (HONS 4610) over three semesters;
- successfully complete and present an Honors Thesis or Capstone Project;
- be in good standing in the University Honors Program at the time of graduation.
- Students completing the Honors Requirements in English will count the three credit hours of the Honors Research Seminar (HONS 4610) toward their general electives, which means that they will have a total of 15 hours for other general elective courses rather than 18 hours.

Program:

A strong Department of English is central to a liberal arts education because it helps students to become incisive in their critical thinking, effective as communicators, aware of cultural diversity, and skilled as interpreters of the written and spoken word in all areas of life. We are committed to academic excellence, innovative instruction, and collaborative service to the community.

The discipline of English – a traditional core of the humanities – asks the big questions: What does it mean to be human? How do we make meaning in this world? What is the relationship of individuals to society? Today these questions are complicated by topics such as class, race, ethnicity, and gender – all of which are addressed by classes in the Department. From Shakespeare to Postcolonial Studies, the Department of English has something for everyone.

Studying literature provides excellent preparation for professional employment in any area where the close examination of written texts and the ability to communicate well are important. The Department of English takes pride in working with students to connect their immediate studies with their long-term goals.

A student graduating with a B.A. degree in English will be able to demonstrate the following:

- Employ clear and precise prose.
- Recognize and analyze the significance of literary techniques.
- Use literary criticism and theory appropriately.
- Situate and interpret a text in its historical, cultural, or literary context.
- Give a clear and poised presentation directed to an audience conversant with literary concepts.
